

Our Projects

It's our privilege to work for Sudan's wonderful women and great girls...

CURRENT PROJECTS:

Kunyuk School for Girls, Akon, South SudanWe believe that educating women reverses the marginalization that has fueled Sudan's bloody wars. That's why we're so committed to the 525 girls of this primary school in rural Akon. Learn more...

Women's Peace School, Akon, South SudanOur adult literacy program serves 200 women, most of whom are mothers of Kunyuk students. Their mission statement identifies education as a key to change: "The Women's Peace School empowers women who were not educated because of the war through life-changing knowledge and literacy. PAST PROJECTS:

Grinding Mills In southern Sudan, most women spend an average of eight hours a day pounding their staple grain - sorghum - into an edible powder. At the request of formerly enslaved women, My Sister's Keeper helped the villages of Panliet and Akon acquire grinding mills to help establish some sense of economic viability. Learn more...

Supporting the Prevention of HIV / AIDSToday, as peace opens up routes of travel for the first time in decades, it brings with it an opportunity for the spread of HIV. In 2002, My Sister's Keeper brought Sudanese medical doctor Luka Deng to the United States for in-depth training at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, MA on the prevention of HIV/AIDS in rural Africa. We are working to contain this epidemic and prevent future diagnoses.
